People Divided Over Linking Traffic Fines With Power Bills

Hyderabad: The Supreme Court's suggestion to link unpaid traffic e-challans with electricity bills to improve recovery has triggered debate over how traffic penalties should be enforced, with citizens and road-safety advocates raising questions about implementation, legal procedures and whether stronger recovery measures would lead to better driving behaviour. Observing that states and Union Territories had around Rs 45,000 crore in outstanding e-challans, and of which about Rs 25,000 crore had been recovered, a bench of Justice J.B. Pardiwala and Justice K.V. Viswanathan said issuing challans alone was not sufficient and suggested exploring measures to ensure recovery.
"If people are not paying traffic challans, add it to their electricity dues bill. They will have to pay electricity bills, otherwise the power line will be disconnected. Work it out. In this country, you have to find a way out," the bench said. The observations came during the hearing of a plea concerning systemic reforms in road safety, traffic enforcement and post-accident victim care.
