Godavari–Cauvery Link: A Lifeline to Drought-Hit South

Interlinking of Godavari and Cauvery rivers can make southern states free from the problem of drought, Andhra Pradesh Chief Minister N. Chandrababu Naidu said on Monday. He lamented that even during drought conditions, 2,000 TMC of water is flowing into the sea. If at least 200 TMC of Godavari floodwater is utilised, the Rayalaseema region will flourish with abundant greenery and crops, he said while launching the 'Jal Jeevan Mission 2.0 – Amarajeevi Jaladhara' programmes in Proddatur in Kadapa district. Chandrababu Naidu said it was his government that interlinked the Godavari and Krishna rivers.He vowed to complete the Polavaram project before the Godavari Pushkaram and said Prime Minister Narendra Modi will dedicate the project to the nation. Reiterating that 36 irrigation projects worth Rs 35,000 crore will be launched over the next three years, he said the government has already released a schedule for completion of the projects. The Chief Minister, along with Deputy Chief Minister Pawan Kalyan and state BJP President PVN Madhav, laid the foundation for the 'Jal Jeevan Mission' and 'Amarajeevi Jaladhara' programmes aimed at providing tap water connections to every household, with an outlay of Rs 30,136 crore. “We are implementing measures to provide water to 90 lakh households, 48,000 rural areas, and 3.30 crore people,” Chandrababu Naidu said. The Chief Minister slammed the YSR Congress Party for undermining Jal Jeevan Mission. He said while states like Uttar Pradesh (Rs 1 lakh crore), Madhya Pradesh (Rs 83,000 crore), and Kerala (Rs 85,000 crore) received significant funds from the Centre under the Jal Jeevan Mission, the previous government did a disservice to Andhra Pradesh by securing only Rs 2,600 crore. He alleged that villages suffered due to the negligence and failure of the previous government, as they were left without roads, streetlights, or water. “Rural communities were left in tears due to the destructive policies of the previous regime. When considering the state of roads, compare the past with the present.

Vishwakarmas Seek MLC Seat Under Governor’s Quota

JAC Calls for Unity and Political Representation

Several speakers have demanded that the Vishwakarma community be treated as a single social group in the caste census, stating that dividing the community based on traditional occupations and counting them separately was unjust. They said the Vishwakarma community would gain greater recognition and political strength through unity. Speaking at a round-table meeting held at the Somajiguda Press Club under the chairmanship of JAC Co-Convenor Adluri Ravindra Achari, JAC representatives and journalists stressed the need for greater political awareness among the community. The speakers alleged that the community was being divided with political motives. They pointed out that traditional occupations such as carpentry, blacksmithing, goldsmithing, metalwork and sculpture had resulted in the community being classified into different groups, thereby reducing its overall population strength and limiting its ability to benefit from government schemes. They said many members of the community had moved away from their traditional occupations and were now working in various fields. Against this backdrop, the JAC announced that its elections would be held on November 14, followed by the formation of the new body. The meeting was attended by JAC representatives and others, including journalist Kalidas and Raghuveer.

GHMC cancels works around KBR Park, saves ₹400 crore

Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation (GHMC) Commissioner R.V. Karnan on Monday announced major changes to the traffic management framework around KBR Park during an inspection of the KBR Park–Jubilee Hills Check Post stretch. The decision would save the civic body approximately ₹400 crore, he said.

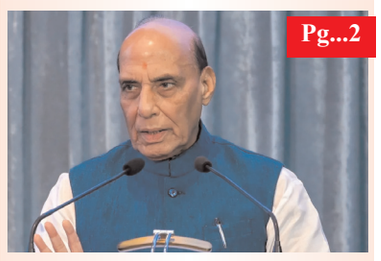

As part of measures to improve connectivity along the high-density corridor, the GHMC will construct a six-lane steel bridge connecting Nagarjuna Circle with Jubilee Hills Check Post. The bridge is targeted for completion by October 2027.

An underpass will also be constructed near KBR Park to further ease traffic congestion and improve the flow of vehicles in the area, Karnan said.

Surplus Liquidity Swells; RBI Mops Up ₹2.1 Lakh Crore

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) absorbed Rs 2,10,192 crore from the banking system on Monday through two overnight Variable Rate Reverse Repo (VRRR) auctions -- reflecting the central bank's ongoing efforts to drain excess liquidity from the financial system. In the first auction, the RBI received bids worth Rs 2,10,688 crore against a notified amount of Rs 2 trillion. The central bank accepted Rs 2,00,050 crore at a weighted average rate of 5.24 per cent. The response was considerably weaker in the second auction, where banks submitted bids worth only Rs 10,142 crore against the notified amount of Rs 50,000 crore. The RBI accepted the entire bid amount.

The move comes at a time when liquidity conditions in the banking system remain highly comfortable. According to RBI data, surplus liquidity stood at around Rs 5.16 trillion as of October 4. Over the past two months, the central bank has conducted a series of VRRR auctions to absorb excess funds from the banking system and ensure that short-term money market rates remain close to the repo rate, which serves as the RBI's key policy benchmark.

Banking system liquidity has been supported by substantial mobilisation of Foreign Currency Non-Resident (Bank) or FCNR(B) deposits. These inflows brought foreign currency into the banking system, while subsequent swap transactions with the RBI injected rupee liquidity into banks. In addition to FCNR(B) inflows, government spending at the end of the month, including payments towards salaries and pensions, has further boosted liquidity in the system. With liquidity remaining significantly above neutral levels, market participants expect the RBI to continue deploying short-term liquidity management tools, including VRRR auctions, to absorb surplus funds and maintain stability in money market rates.

Mayawati Reinstates Akash Anand Again After Repeated Ousters

Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) supremo Mayawati made a U-turn once again and said her nephew Akash Anand has been appointed as party's national coordinator once again. This comes days after Akash was removed from the party's key position in an organisational revamp ahead of next year's assembly elections in Uttar Pradesh. In a long post in Hindi on microblogging site X (formerly Twitter), Uttar Pradesh's former chief minister said Akash's conduct and personality have largely been satisfactory, but there were certain reasons that forced to make some organisational changes within the party and forced Ashok Siddharth to retire from politics. She said people had observed the changes in Akash's personality and working style, which was evident by his recent X post. Following this, requests were made by many to allow Akash to return to the party and continue working for the BSP. Mayawati said she also hopes that Ashok Siddharth's retirement from politics will ensure a smooth functioning within the party. Although, much of this will also depend on Akash, she noted. "Accordingly, after considerable deliberation and in the interest of the party and the movement, the party has decided today to once again appoint Shri Akash Anand as the National Cordinator of the BSP and give him an opportunity to work for the party again," she said. "With these important points, and along with today's decision taken in the interest of the party and the movement, I wish Shri Akash Anand a bright political future. I also extend my love and blessings to him, his younger brother Shri Ishaan Anand and his father Shri Anand Kumar," she said, expressing gratitude to supporters of the BSP.

The many U-turns of Mayawati

Mayawati has made many U-turn over Akash and kept removing him and then re-appointing him again within the party. In September, she declared that Akash, who was her once favourite nephew, will be freed from the BSP. Akash was replaced was Mayawati's younger nephew Ishan Anand.But later, Akash apologised to Mayawati and also dismissed rumours that he would join another outfit before the 2027 Uttar Pradesh elections. He also described Mayawati as his political guru and said everything he knows about his politics, he has learnt from her."Therefore, today I wish to place my words directly before you and before the entire Bahujan society. For the past few days, various kinds of news and rumours about me have been circulating in the media and social media. I want to clarify: I am not going to any other political party," he had said on X on October 2.

Akash's this post, Mayawati said Monday, was the reason he was reinstated in the party. She now hopes that the party would not require further revamps and would function smoothly before the assembly elections, which will likely be held in February or March next year.

BJP Names 8 for UP Rajya Sabha, Drops Hardeep Puri

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) on Monday announced eight candidates for upcoming elections to 10 Rajya Sabha seats in Uttar Pradesh. The party fielded eight candidates, including party's Uttar Pradesh MLA Dharampal Singh, and senior leaders Radhakant Ojha, Gopi Krishna Pandey and Prakash Pal. Vidyasagar Sonkar, a former Lok Sabha member and ex-Uttar Pradesh MLA who is considered BJP's Dalit face in Uttar Pradesh, has also been fielded by the party.

Former Lok Sabha member Priyanka Singh Rawat and senior leader Ram Pratap Singh Chauhan, who has campaigned extensively for the party at the grassroot levels in Uttar Pradesh, were also given a Rajya Sabha ticket. Veteran BJP leader and Jharkhand Governor Santosh Kumar Gangwar's daughter Shruti Gangwar was also fielded by the party.

Hardeep Puri, BL Verma dropped

Surprisingly, Union Petroleum and Natural Gas Minister Hardeep Singh Puri and Union Minister of State for Consumer Affairs Banwari Lal Verma -who are members of the Rajya Sabha - have been dropped by the BJP. Senior leader Arun Singh, who was BJP's former national general secretary, has also been dropped by the party. Geeta Shakya, Seema Dwivedi and former Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar's son Neeraj Shekhar -- all members of the Upper House -- have also failed to receive a ticket from the party.

Upper hand for BJP in RS polls

Of the 10 seats where polling would be held, the BJP currently holds eight seats. Numerically, the party has strength to get all eight of candidates elected to the Upper House again. However, Akhilesh Yadav's Samajwadi Party (SP) has already declared that it would field three candidates.

The SP has strength to get two of its leaders elected, but sources had earlier told India TV that the party is banking on cross-voting by some NDA MLAs to win three seats. The party has already announced veteran leader Ram Gopal Yadav and Reliance Industries executive Dhanraj Parimal Nathwani as its candidates and could declare the three candidate soon."We will get all three of our candidates elected through the same route by which the BJP had got its candidates elected in the last Rajya Sabha elections," SP's Chandauli MP Virendra Singh told news agency PTI on October 2. The polling for the Rajya Sabha elections would be held on October 16 from 9 am to 4 pm, and the counting of votes will take place on the same day.

Telangana to formulate policy for foreign university campuses in 'Future City'

Telangana Chief Secretary Sanjay Jaju on Monday directed officials to formulate a comprehensive policy designed to attract renowned international educational institutions to the state. At a review meeting, he asked officials to take steps towards establishing campuses of prominent foreign universities in 'Future City' to transform Telangana into an international education hub. Officials reported that, so far, the University of London, the University of Birmingham, and four other international universities have expressed interest in setting up branches in 'Future City'. He stated that the policy should encompass aspects such as inviting foreign universities, providing necessary infrastructure and investments, facilitating approvals, and managing academic programs.

The Chief Secretary emphasised the need to make world-class educational opportunities available in Telangana and to implement measures that provide students with access to international standards of education, research, and skill development. The Chief Secretary directed officials to hold consultations with prominent foreign universities regarding the establishment of proposed international educational institutions in 'Future City' and to prepare a clear action plan in time for the upcoming global summit.

The review meeting focused on the construction of 'Young India Integrated Schools' across the state, the development of educational infrastructure, and the measures required to establish world-class higher education institutions in 'Future City'. The government aims to establish 'Young India Integrated Schools' in a phased manner across the state's 119 Assembly constituencies. The Chief Secretary directed officials to accelerate the work to ensure the completion of 67 schools by December 2027 and to increase this number to 87 by June 2028.

Plans have been drawn up to construct each school on an area of approximately 26 acres, equipped with all modern amenities. Essential infrastructure—including sports grounds, hostels, staff quarters, modern kitchens, and digital classrooms—will be provided.

The Chief Secretary directed officials to regularly review the progress of construction works and ensure their completion within the stipulated deadlines while adhering to quality standards. These projects involve constructing campuses that house schools dedicated to the welfare of SC, ST, BC, and minority communities in a unified setting. The 'Young India Integrated Schools' are being established to serve as model institutions for the rest of the country.

Special Chief Secretaries Jayesh Ranjan and Sabyasachi Ghosh; Principal Secretaries Sandeep Kumar Sultania, Yogita Rana, and Rahul Bojja; Commissioner of Higher Education Sridevasena; Special Secretary Krishna Aditya; and others participated in the meeting.

Trump says 'threat' led US to pull bombers from RAF Fairford

The Pentagon confirmed on Sunday it had removed its bombers - thought to be about a dozen B-1s - from the base back to their home stations in America. Speaking to reporters as he departed for Nebraska on Monday, Trump said the US had known of a "threat", which led them to move the bombers.

A No 10 spokesperson had insisted RAF Fairford was safe and pointed to Trump's comments last week, where he praised the UK's "police, defence and security services" in relation to the base. Trump's comments appear to confirm reports by US media that a new threat led to the bombers being removed after a major incident on 27 September when police were alerted to three "suspicious vehicles" near the airbase. While speaking to a gaggle of reporters outside the White House, Trump was asked if a "specific threat" had led the US to pull its bombers from the airbase.

Trump replied: "Yeah I think we can say that. They didn't fly out by accident. "There were some threats. And rather than tempting the enemy, we'll capture the enemy and beat the enemy. But why should we leave them there? So we moved them around a little bit. Not very far. He added Washington "actually knows the people that made the threat", but he did not confirm who.

The exact nature of the threat that prompted the aircraft's removal from RAF Fairford remains unclear, but sources in Washington speculated to the BBC it might have revolved around sabotage attempts or attempts to strike the sensitive, expensive aircraft in the event of resumed hostilities with Iran.

One source close to the White House pointed to Ukraine's Operation Spiderweb - a covert drone attack on five Russian bases in June last year - as an example of what an enemy force could do, even at a distance.

"Whatever they thought it was, it was taken extremely seriously," the source said.

Trump's comments, and those of Vance before him, stand in stark contrast to those of Secretary of State Marco Rubio.

While both Trump and Vance pointed to an unspecified threat, Rubio was much more guarded in his language, noting that it was "not unusual" for military units and assets to rotate and be moved around the world. A map of the globe highlighting the US, the UK and Iran, with a label showing RAF Fairford in the UK in between the US and Iran. RAF Fairford - in the Cotswolds in Gloucestershire - has been at the centre of an incident being investigated by counter-terror police. Five men were initially arrested on suspicion of terror offences and subsequently released on bail. A sixth man, a UK-Iranian national, was also later arrested and released on bail. Following the release of the first five men, Trump criticised the decision and US officials suggested Iran could have been involved in the incident. Whitehall sources have not disputed that the decision from Washington to remove the bombers was in response to the incident at the airbase in Gloucestershire.

Speaking earlier on Monday, Rubio said he would not directly tie last week's incident to the decision to pull bombers from RAF Fairford.

He added: "It's not unusual to see movement of assets to different parts of the world based on exercises, redeployments, people changing out and new people coming in, new planes coming in and old planes going out."

Rubio said the US still had full confidence in the security of all its bases and that British authorities had been very co-operative since the incident.

'Not again': Arrest of US marine for murder reignites protests in Japan's Okinawa

AFP via Getty Images This photo taken on August 23, 2022 shows a US military Osprey aircraft (R) at the US Marine Corps Air Station Futenma in the centre of the city of Ginowan, Okinawa prefecture. For many Okinawa locals, the arrest of a US soldier accused of robbing and killing a woman in a hotel room has reignited decades of frustration over crimes involving US military personnel there.("Honestly my first reaction was, 'Not again,'" 52-year-old longtime Okinawa resident Ai Sato told the BBC. "Nothing has changed since I was a child. How many times are we going to repeat the same thing, create more victims, cause their families to suffer, and ultimately, cause the people of Okinawa to grieve?" Akemi Oshiro, a 62-year-old Ginowan resident shared similar sentiments. "I know we shouldn't get used to terrible things like this, but because they keep happening, I've stopped being surprised,". Okinawa hosts the largest US military presence in Japan. It is home to several US military bases and tens of thousands of American troops. US Marine Lance Corporal Devin Jacob Ballard, 20, was arrested by Japanese police on Sunday. Police say an investigation is underway and that Ballard is in Japanese custody because the alleged crime was unrelated to official military duties. Whether a US service member is acting in the performance of official duty or not can determine which country has primary jurisdiction. When Japan has jurisdiction, but the suspect is under US custody, they can retain custody until Japan brings charges. The Okinawa prefectural police say 39-year-old Anna Yagi was found dead early 3 October in a hotel room in Naha. Security footage allegedly shows a man believed to be the suspect entering the hotel with the woman and leaving alone with her belongings. Local media citing police have reported that Yagi appeared to have been strangled with a cord. Japanese Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi registered an official protest with Washington. But residents like Sato feel that's far from enough. "I am deeply disappointed by the same kinds of government comments we have been hearing for decades -- that they will protest or that they take the matter seriously." "I want Prime Minister Takaichi to call President Trump directly, someone with whom she has been emphasizing as having a close relationship with, and discuss concrete measures to prevent this from happening yet again," she said. Following news of the suspected murder, people in Japan have been voicing anger with some 100 people protesting in both Naha and Tokyo.

Others took to social media expressing their outrage and demanding justice with one user saying: "Enough is enough." Over the past few years, a number of accidents and crimes have led to growing local opposition to the US presence on the island. The 2016 rape and murder of a 20-year-old local woman saw tens of thousands of protesters demonstrate against the heavy US presence there. A former US marine subsequently received a life sentence for the crime. The US currently has about 55,000 military personnel stationed in Japan, with the heaviest concentration based on the tropical island prefecture. Okinawa is one of the country's smallest prefectures by size, but 70% of the land used exclusively by the US military in Japan is located there.In 1972, Okinawa prefecture was returned to Japanese control after United States forces occupied the islands at the end of the Second World War.

Zelensky condemns 'horrific' Russian strike on boat carrying corn in Black Sea

Romanian Interior Ministry via REUTERS The fire-damaged "Royad Mammadov" ship in the Black Sea after a fire aboard the vessel outside Romania's territorial waters left two people dead and prompted a rescue operation in which others were rescued, in this handout image released on October 5, 2026. The fire-damaged vessel was pictured after Romanian authorities launched a rescue mission Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelensky has condemned a "horrific" Russian attack on a vessel carrying corn in the Black Sea. The ship's captain was killed in the strike involving two drones, Zelensky said, and another sailor was unaccounted for. Eleven crew members - nationals of Azerbaijan and India - have been rescued. Romania said it had mounted a rescue mission after "a fire on the ship Royad Mammadov" outside the country's territorial waters. It said two people had died. Russia has not commented, but its defence ministry earlier said it had struck two cargo vessels. Russia has been pounding Ukrainian infrastructure in what it says is retaliation for Ukrainian attacks on Russian oil refineries and ships in the Black Sea. Monday's attack by Russia targeted "a civilian vessel in neutral waters carrying corn and owned by Turkey", Volodymyr Zelensky said. He did not give the location of the ship, but Romania's interior ministry said it had sunk about 30 nautical miles south of its port of Sfantu Gheorghe.

"At around 11:00 (09:00 GMT), Coast Guard border police officers were informed that a fire had broken out on board a commercial vessel located within Romania's exclusive economic zone," the ministry said in a statement. "Eleven crew members have been rescued. Two deceased persons have also been identified," it added. Ukraine's president said he had "repeatedly proposed concrete steps to de-escalate the situation and ensure security in the Black Sea" - and other countries had made "relevant proposals" too.

"But Russia consistently chooses terror and sinking civilian vessels instead of normal maritime navigation," Zelensky said. "Pressure is needed to restore global food security," he added. "And everyone who is genuinely interested in this must help." On Sunday, Russia's defence ministry said it would intensify its strikes across Ukraine in response to comments made by Zelensky earlier last week, in which he said Kyiv would ramp up its attacks on Russian oil refineries.

Flydubai Co-Pilot Allegedly Planned Tel Aviv Airport Attack

The co-pilot accused of trying to hijack a flydubai plane planned to crash the aircraft into Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion airport or a tower block in the Israeli city, US and Israeli reports suggest. The Omani national was a "lone wolf" extremist, according to the reports. The United Arab Emirates' attorney-general has said the co-pilot attempted to carry out a "terrorist act" on flight FZ1073 from Dubai to Tel Aviv last Wednesday.

He attacked and wounded the captain with the emergency crash axe kept in the cockpit before being overpowered by passengers. Another crew travelling on the plane was able to land it in Saudi Arabia.

Israel's prime minister has said the co-pilot underwent "Islamist radical indoctrination" and the captain, passengers and a second crew prevented "a 9/11 disaster".

More details about the co-pilot of the flydubai flight – whom multiple reports have named as Hamam al-Hammami – emerged over the weekend as he continued to be questioned in the UAE, with Israeli representatives being updated. Israeli media cited sources with knowledge of the probe as saying the co-pilot told investigators that, having attacked Capt Smit Machchhar, he intended to continue flying the plane as normal into Israeli airspace and receive landing clearances from Ben Gurion airport. He then planned to crash the Boeing 737 MAX – with more than 180 passengers on board – into the airport or into a tower block in central Tel Aviv, in the style of al-Qaeda's 11 September 2001 attacks in the US, according to the reports. The sources are quoted as saying he was most likely to have acted alone rather than on behalf of a radical organisation or foreign government.

The co-pilot also reportedly told investigators that he had intended to hijack and crash a previous flight to Tel Aviv but changed his mind because he knew someone on board.

There was no immediate comment from Emirati or Israeli authorities.

UAE Attorney-General Hamad al-Shamsi said on Saturday that his country's investigations would establish the full circumstances, motives and any links related to the incident, and that the results would be announced upon their conclusion. Questions are also being asked about major security lapses, including how the attacker was recruited by flydubai and given clearance to fly a plane filled with Israelis to Tel Aviv. Regional officials said the co-pilot was barred from flying by Oman's national carrier, Oman Air, and moved to an administrative job because of concerns about his extremist views. He was later hired by UAE-based flydubai after undergoing standard security checks that did not examine his background for potential signs of radicalisation, according to the officials. Israeli aviation regulations also state that pilots who are citizens of countries without formal diplomatic relations with Israel, like Oman, are not permitted to operate flights to the country. Regional officials told the Associated Press on Sunday that Emirati authorities had shared with Israel a list of passengers and crew ahead of flight FZ1073's departure.

Israel's Shin Bet domestic security agency said the transport ministry was responsible for vetting such lists from foreign airlines.Israel's Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, has told the head of the National Security Council to review "all security aspects regarding foreign civil aviation to Israel".

British Airways flight to Chicago declares emergency over Ireland, descends to 9,000 feet

A British Airways flight operating from London to Chicago declared an emergency while flying over Ireland, prompting the aircraft to squawk the 7700 emergency code and descend to around 9,000 feet, according to flight-tracking data on Monday. According to flight-tracking website Flightradar24, flight BA295 triggered the emergency alert while en route across the Atlantic. The Boeing aircraft's descent and emergency signal attracted attention from aviation observers, although the exact nature of the incident was not immediately known. The 7700 transponder code is used by flight crews to indicate a general emergency requiring priority handling by air traffic control. While the code alerts controllers that urgent assistance may be needed, it does not specify the cause, which can range from a technical malfunction and medical emergency to other operational concerns.

British Airways had not immediately disclosed the reason behind the emergency, and further details regarding the aircraft's condition and subsequent flight path were awaited.

The incident comes days after another high-profile aviation emergency involving flydubai flight FZ1073, which was forced to divert after an alleged attack inside the cockpit during a flight from Dubai to Tel Aviv. That aircraft transmitted both the 7700 emergency code and the 7500 code, which is associated with unlawful interference or a possible hijacking situation. The Boeing 737 MAX 8 was carrying 174 passengers and crew when the incident occurred on September 30.

According to reports, the aircraft entered a rapid descent after the alleged cockpit altercation.

Despite sustaining injuries, the captain was able to regain control of the situation with assistance from passengers and off-duty pilots travelling on the flight. The aircraft subsequently diverted to Tabuk in Saudi Arabia and landed safely. Authorities in the United Arab Emirates later described the incident as a terrorist attack and launched an investigation. The co-pilot involved was subsequently transferred to UAE custody.

The British Airways incident is understood to be entirely separate from the flydubai case, and there is currently no indication of any connection between the two events. Aviation authorities and the airline are expected to provide further information once the circumstances behind BA295's emergency declaration have been established.

Telangana tops the country in alcohol consumption!

- Higher in rural areas.. Double the national averageTelangana tops the country in alcohol consumption!
- Survey reveals that 43.9 percent of men in the state drink alcohol Higher in rural areas.. Double the national average, the increase in the number of women is worrying

Mullangi Mohan Reddy Telangana Essence Mahabubabad District Correspondent October 5Telangana state has topped the country in alcohol consumption. The NFHS-6 survey data revealed that 43.9 percent of men above the age of 15 in the state drink alcohol. While the national average is 18.9 percent, the fact that this number is more than double in Telangana is worrying.<The survey stated that alcohol consumption is higher in rural areas compared to urban areas. While 46.6 percent of men in rural areas drink alcohol, it was recorded at 36.3 percent in urban areas. The high alcohol consumption habit in rural areas has become a social and health concern. When it comes to liquor shops, most of the permits are given in the cities. In rural areas, however, there are permits for one or two shops. However, no permits are given in the villages. So far, so good. When it comes to drunkards, even though there are no liquor shops, the youth in rural areas are consuming more alcohol. These are not estimates. This is recorded in the records of the authorities. When it comes to beer, beer is consumed more than drinking water. This is because belt shops have been set up in rural areas, just like grocery shops, tea shops, and other shops. If there are 50 shops in villages, half of them sell alcohol. They are sold in rural areas more competitively than in cities. An example can be taken from Gandhi Jayanti. The government banned the sale of alcohol on Gandhi Jayanti. Sales were made from behind the shutters of the shops, which were locked. When it comes to belt shops in rural areas, they bought it without standing in front of the liquor shops, just like the audience queues up in front of newly released movie talkies. Politicians and public representatives openly claim that more sales were made on the day of the ban. This is the situation in rural areas. If we look at the state-wise, after Telangana, Rajasthan is in second place with 42.2 percent and Chhattisgarh is in third place with 38.3 percent. Since alcohol consumption is high in Telangana, there is a need to increase health awareness among the people and conduct a wide campaign on the ill effects of alcohol. Telangana has topped the country in alcohol consumption. The NFHS-6 survey data revealed that 43.9 percent of males above the age of 15 in the state consume alcohol. #AK47 Is Out! Advantage Vishnu–Vijay

Blaming the delayed post-production work and how industry practices are resulting in delays of movies, Naga Vamsi confirmed today that the upcoming Trivikram directorial, featuring senior hero Venkatesh in the lead, "Adarsha Kutumbam", got postponed. The film will not be coming on October 9th, and the producer confirmed that he's not sure about October 30th as well, and the movie is currently postponed indefinitely.

Now that the October 9th slot is empty, surely that might help other movies in the race. On that very same day, there is Sree Vishnu's Comrade Kalyan, which will now get a superior advantage at the box office as the Dasara holidays are just starting off. At the same time, a week later there is Vijay Devarakonda's Ranabaali hitting cinemas, and lack of Venkatesh's movie at the box office might also help this project too. Because in any given holiday season, the presence of Venkatesh's movie will make the family audience turn towards his movie only. Now that #AK47 is out of the race, surely Sree Vishnu and Vijay Devarakonda got a huge advantage at the box office, while Jailer 2 is only their biggest competition that's hitting the cinemas in terms of a dubbed project. However, with #AK47 going out of the race, surely it works for other films now.
